FOREWORD

By a year's journey around the campus of Ward-Belmont, we hope to make immortal the love and memories we hold for our school.
Mrs. Ada Rice Beard devoted her talent and her time to her work in Ward-Belmont, where for eight years she was advisor to the staffs of the two Ward-Belmont publications, the Hyphen and the Milestones. It is in memory of her work for Ward-Belmont that we dedicate to her this, the Milestones of 1927.
OUR JOURNEY

Before we actually start on our journey, we wish to present to you some of the views of the country through which we will pass, and to acquaint you with those who are in a large measure responsible for the prestige and achievements of its citizens. To be explicit, we refer to Dr. Blanton, Mr. Barton, Miss Hawks, and Miss Mills. It is largely through the patient and persistent effort of these four that so many advantages, both social and academic, are offered to girls at Ward-Belmont to-day.

The first few times you take the journey which this book affords, you will probably pass over the section of views with a mere glance at each; but as the memories of Ward-Belmont become more and more vague and centered about a few close friends, this section will become increasingly dear to you. We hope so, at least, for that is its purpose.
Dr. J. D. Blanton, President
John W. Barton, Vice President

Eight
Miss Lelia D. Mills, Dean of Women
Miss Lena J. Hawks, Dean of Faculty
This view of Ward-Belmont first greets us when we arrive and last fades into the distance when we leave.
The campus during these days thrilled the Southern girls and reminded those from the North of their own homes.
Pembroke is the largest dormitory on the campus, and is the home of the majority of the first-year college girls.
Senior Hall is the newest dormitory of Ward-Belmont, and is cherished more than any spot on the campus by the Seniors.
Academic Building, Ward-Belmont’s “little red schoolhouse”
The fountain marks the most important highway on the campus, the connecting link between the post office and the classes.
South Front, which contains the home office and Recreation Hall, is the heart of Ward-Belmont's social activities.

If results were commensurate with effort, the 1927 MILESTONES would be nonpareil. The members of the Staff have worked diligently to develop the book so that it may be of equal value to every Ward-Belmont girl, no matter what are her individual interests. We, as members of the MILESTONES Staff, have enjoyed our work, and have gained invaluable experience in doing it. We hope that you who read this book may enjoy it now, but especially that you who are in school here this year may enjoy the book more and more as years go on, for in your enjoyment is our reward.

CLASSES
SENIOR POEM

BY HELEN HOLT

Life is a castle built on the sand
That the high sea washes away,
A journey through a mysterious land,
Where Uncertainty rules with a wavering hand
Through his minions, Change and Delay.

Of Life we can never enjoy our fill—
Time hurries us on and on.
We cannot loiter wherever we will,
Or build us a cottage beneath the hill,
Before we must be gone.

As the Senior classes of years before
Have followed the trend of Life,
So upon our long journey we take one step more,
Reluctantly pass from Ward-Belmont’s door
Into fields of challenge and strife.

Our mem’ries will turn with a backward glance,
As our path’s weary mazes we tread,
To old friendships’ dear hours, at a class, at a dance;
But mem’ries, though sweet, cannot stay our advance—
Life relentlessly forges ahead.
Blanche Motley

Motley—the austere President of the Senior Class—and yet not too austere, for she enjoys jumping rope and participating in childish sports just as much as the rest of us. She deserves all the good things which are said about her and all the honors she has won, for she is capable, efficient, and dependable—in other words, that rare creature, "the all-round good sport."

Kirtlye Choisser

Kirtlye is Kirtlye, and it's difficult to say much about her. She's most too perfect to put down on paper successfully. "O, for cryin' inward," of course she's not a prune and prism sort of creature—anything else but. She's like her State of Montana—straightforward, sincere, clear-headed, friendly; and she's more fun than Senior Free Day or Harold Lloyd.

MARGARET CLARK

She's not a flower from an old bouquet, because she isn't that type; but we think Clarkie is mighty sweet. So little and piquant; so wistful, yet so happy. We haven't asked her roommate what she thinks of her, but we guess that particular roomie is bossed by five feet of spontaneous combustion. The little lady comes from Indiana, and plays a fair game of bridge. Kinda looks like a little imp, doesn't she? Yeah, sure she is.

X. L.

DOROTHY ELLINGTON

Dottie certainly is one of the world's wonders. If she had had the chance, she would have softened Bluebeard's heart. We know it. Then, too, she's been Treasurer of the Seniors of '27, which is no mean sport. She's original, and can talk at great length. Just step right up and suggest the subjects, ladies—Dot will do the rest.

EVELYN ADAMS

Evelyn came to Ward-Belmont as a Senior. And while we’re not saying much, we really think that is one of the reasons so many men left home last year to be collegiate at Ann Arbor. We also add that we don’t blame them, for, as Lancelot said, “She has a lovely face.”

X. L.

KATHERINE AMOS

Katy goes “the even tenor of her way,” being her own natural self, and lo! she becomes one of the most popular girls in school. And all this while being General Proctor. We hand her the laurel wreath. Although Katy does not act off the stage, she does act on it. She’s one of Miss Townsend’s prides-and-joys.

A. K.

Retta Barnard

Retta can always be counted on to make life interesting. She is a whiz at organizing little mental telepathy parties. But, above all, let us not omit the statement that Retta is one of those rare young females who can sew well and who enjoys sewing. These characteristics make her, it seems to us, an excellent candidate for "the noblest position a woman can fill" (a la our chapel speakers).

Penta Tau.

Ruth Barnhard

Now let us present to you a famous wit of the class. Ruth looks as solemn as the night watchman while uttering absurdities that would get a smile from even the lions at South Front. To hear Ruth either unravel a calculus problem or describe the Sistine Chapel is a liberal education in itself.

Del Vers.
Cleta Black

Don't some names fit well? Have you ever seen anything blacker than Cleta's hair—or curlier? Although she gets a certificate in Physical Ed., we have our idea about how much she'll use it. Athletic type? No more than she is a baby-doll. Luck to you, Cleta.

Agora.

Margaret Bradley

"R." is for Regal. And regal is for Margaret Bradley—our stately brunette. Her George Washington profile is still the admiration of the school. It may be a good thing that Margaret came to Nashville to spend the winter, because it must have been so much easier for those military academy boys at Sweetwater to keep their minds on their work.

Virginia Buston

No, you have us all wrong. We were not—positively were not—going to say, "She's little, but, O my!" “Baby” is always on the job, and gets as much accomplished as most persons twice her size. Optimistic, happy, conscientious, and enthusiastic—that's a combination which makes up one of the best-liked girls in school.

A. K.
Secretary Virginia Club.

Mildred Byrd

One of the most modest, retiring girls in school, despite her lovely, curling locks—that's Mildred. The girls who know her best say that there is not a more conscientious girl in all the student body, and the student body boasts some conscientious maidens, as every one knows. She came to Ward-Belmont two years ago.

Osiron.
Lucile Canfield

Know what animation is? It's the quality that Lucile has that makes her so hopelessly attractive. She is interested in life, in people, in everything. Perhaps that's why poor little Susie Trouble is always in some sort of a scrape. But she gets out of her difficulties just as gracefully as she gets into them, so she's never in trouble for long. She can never, like Barrie's Maggie, lament that she has no charm.

F. F.
President Ohio Club.

Alice Carr

Alice may be small, but she means business. Just ask any one who lived in Founders the first semester. Studying and her roommate consume most of her time, and she has given us only enough of her friendship to tantalize us. She can't decide whether to sell pins in St. Louis next year or enter some other kind of business career. In either case we venture to say the Captain will not be far away.

Del Vers.
MYRTLE CARTER

Our Dresden china girl is Myrtle Carter. She looks too small and dainty to be real. But, never mind, she doesn't act like a doll. She's the sort of girl who "gets about," whether as Martha Washington or just as herself. Myrtle is the personified answer to the good old problem of Why Men Leave Home.

Penta Tau.
President North Carolina Club.

GEORGIA CHARLES

Here's our idea of a real girl. Georgia's capable; she's enthusiastic; and she's fun to be with. She knows what has to be done, and she does it—without any fuss or feathers and without irritating anybody. As one of her club sisters emphatically asserts, "She's a darn good egg."

VIEVA CHASON

O, how that girl can play the piano! Beethoven or Berlin, it's all the same to Vieva, and she can do credit to either composer. Her club has kept her in training all year for becoming some one's better half; but if her club-house experiences are any indication of her domesticity, she had better choose a musical career if she wants to live with any degree of peace.

Agora.
Chairman Agora House Committee.

KATHERINE CLARK

Here—and we have absolutely no hesitation in saying so—is a girl who has one of the strongest personalities, if not the very strongest and most magnetic personality, of all the girls in school. And we are not given to flattery, either. During rush week the new girls hung round Bill so that the rest of us contemplated doing 'way with her, which might have been done had we not, too, fallen under the spell of her charm. Whenever she's mentioned, some one is sure to say, "Bill's certainly a peach"—than which there is little higher praise.

X. L.
President X. L. Club.
MARGARET COBB

Margaret is one of those marvelous females who have achieved the high estate of the second-year Physical Ed. To those who have reached that almost unattainable position, and still live, let us here, publicly, declare our most fervent admiration and respect. Margaret has experimented with several means of becoming educated. She has been a student at Vanderbilt, a day student at W.-B., and a boarder here. Three Guesses as to which method she found most agreeable.

HARRIET CONDIT

But why do gentlemen prefer blondes? We present to you the answer in two words—Harriet Condit. Harriet came back as a postgraduate to get her certificate in Piano. The lesser inhabitants of Ward-Belmont Land gaze at this willowy blonde and her floppy tan hat, and hope that when their black-hat days are over, they, too, may blossom out and become Harriet-like birds of paradise.

CICELY CONE

Cicely is one of those good old products of the West. Way out West in Kansas, where Cicely lives, they develop girls to such a height that Cicely can stand calmly by a basketball goal, catch the ball, and with perfect facility drop it down through the basket before the thundering herd below her has discovered what has happened. As Bill says, "She's a grand ole girl."

Del Vers.

CAROLINE COSGROVE

Our Irish student President is equally adept at looking beautiful, untangling Cicero, squelching culprits, and writing poetry. Her great love is modern fiction, and her great hate, sentimentality. She is frank, sarcastic, intriguing, sympathetic—O, well, she's Irish. And with all those "cross currents and contradictions" she made us elect her the most tactful girl in school! Caroline!

CARROLL CRUSE

With our hand over our heart, we make deep obeisance to Carroll, wit extraordinary. Clever words and phrases come from her pen (perhaps pencil would be more appropriate) as easily as trite expressions come from most of us. The girl can write. Were there a few more like her in the world, putting out a school Annual would be an exhilarating Roman holiday. If making folks laugh and enjoy life is a great virtue—and we think it is—Carroll is 99 and 44/100% pure. Miss Cruse, we salute you! You're our idea of something good.

JESSAMINE DAGGETT

Now we understand why this age is proud of its women. Why, of course, it's because of such efficient girls as Jess. We're sure that Jerry and Margaret, not to mention Mary, will agree that it's convenient to have a human alarm clock in one's suite. If there is anything Jessamine can't do, we have yet to discover it.

MARGARET DAGGETT

Margaret is a clever girl, who makes grades that not only a mother would find easy to love. And this in spite of the fact that she can't sing. She is another girl who knows how to get things done, whether it comes to working calculus or taking snapshots for Milestones.

EDYTHE DIXON

Although Edythe has none of the other characteristics of a cat, she certainly was born to have nine lives, and each one will be twice as full as the preceding. She has done much for W.-B., as any one knows, and for that and her fun we say she is one peach. She comes from Iowa, and has red hair—which means more than saying that she merely has red hair.

Tri-K.

MARGARET DIXON

We’ve “tried this over on our piano,” and found that she is in tune, and certainly does harmonize with everything. From observation we’d say that she has a good recipe for how to keep from growing old. She’s from Kentucky, is talented in music, has a grand disposition, and can’t be outdone for holding down a seat in the Library.

Reward: One sheepskin.

DOROTHY DUNCAN

The Art Department declares that Dorothy has classic features, and we rise to agree. Her long black hair gives her distinction and emphasizes her classic appearance (if there could be such a thing). But lest you think that Dorothy does nothing but go about looking classical, let us hasten to add that she can hop a trolley or wash hose just as well as the rest of us.

F. F.
MARIETTA DUNCAN

Introducing Miss Marietta Duncan, from the wilds of Texas. Hair, black and curly; eyes, brown and snappy; figure, tall and willowy; personality, 69 and 44/100% engaging. Her anxiety over English B and love of Texas seem to be the greatest influences in her life just at present.

ELEANOR DURHAM

If you want to know what the expression, "a fine girl," really means, just make Eleanor's acquaintance. Appearances are sometimes deceiving; but in this case they are not, for Eleanor's really as sweet as she looks. Not so many girls know her well, but those who do are the fortunate ones. As the advertisements say, "Ask the girls who know her." We will guarantee a favorable answer.

F. F.
Vice President Alabama Club.
BARBARA EHRSAM

All hats off to our dashing, young basketball heroine, for it was "Bob" who made Varsity for two successive years, and any one who has held her breath and watched her tearing around the Gym. knows how she can play. "Bob" comes from Kansas; and if you ever want to give her a big thrill, just tell her you have heard of Enterprise. It will certainly thrill her, but the shock might be too great.

VIRGINIA FARMER

Virginia Farmer is our ideal Kentuckey belle. She is the very personification of loveliness and charm. With her copper-colored hair, her blue eyes, her Kentuckey accent, and that air she has of being intensely interested in everything around her, each would be irresistible, but in combination—well, the ensemble seems too good to be true. Perhaps Virginia is a fairy story princess after all.

Figgins is a good scout. She's one of those people to whom you can go when in dire straits—in dire straits meaning that you haven't studied your History lesson—and say: "Figgins, please tell me something about this—I don't know a thing." And Elizabeth will tell you, and then you'll go to class and make a good recitation, and then the teacher beams on you, and you beam on Figgins. She's little, and has brown hair and brown eyes and a charming laugh.

Elizabeth Fletcher

We can think of many worse fates than being just like you, "Jelly." We certainly would like to have the secret of your success. Just how is it that you get to go out so often? LOUISE FOLKE

Louise came out from the wilds of Texas to procure a large slice of civilization to take back to the natives. She proposes to go back and teach the Texans history and a general course in Southern culture. Well, maybe we did exaggerate a bit. There's nothing even a little bit backwoods about either Galveston or Louise. But she is going to teach History—at least, so she says.

LAURA FORTSON

Lollie, that kindness and sweet smile of yours may go a long way toward convincing your family that a certain somebody may sometime go to work. Little Johnnie Trouble is, paradoxically, the most artistic Senior, and she is rivaled for first place in the entire school only by our redoubtable postgraduate. John is Assistant Art Editor of MILESTONES, and we know for a certainty that she can sketch a fountain just as effectively as she can worry Papa Trouble. And she does the latter most effectively. Elizabeth's spare moments are taken up with struggles in analytic chemistry lab. She's a girl who does things.

Why, her very name suggests the frosty North. Yes, indeed, for Elaine is one of our Michiganders. In her two years with us Elaine has proved herself a combination of efficiency, clear-headedness, and charm. MARIAN VANCE GILBERT

Well, here's generous, obliging, rosy-cheeked Marian to tell you about! Marian came to Ward-Belmont as a Senior, but we all know that we have missed some fine work from her, because this is her last year. Marian is a talented writer, and can talk as well as she can write. She hails from Colorado; and although we haven't asked her, we imagine that she can climb mountains as easily as we can spend money at Ward-Belmont. Or is climbing mountains a Colorado pastime?

HEWELL GIVAN

We scarcely know whether to hand Hewell the laurel wreath for being a prize actress or for being a brilliant student. So we'll just give her the wreath on general principles, and she can decide which of the two it's for. We can't leave her without remarking upon her West-Virginia-Alabama-Tennessee accent. It's a weird and wonderful thing.

MARGUERITE GLIDDEN

If you think it is impossible to make A's in all your classes, just consult Marguerite, for she can tell you how it is done. She is in for all the fun, and we often wonder how she can do the two things so well.

Lib may not be "noisy," but we know from experience that she's a fun-loving gal. She's dignified, but she has a fine sense of humor; is alert, but not interfering. LEONORA HAMILTON

Leonora is that nice little person you see dashing in and out of the office at odd periods. You know—the one with the blue eyes and the "cutest little nose." She talks with a soft drawl and laughs a lot. A word of warning: Beware of talking in cloak rooms—walls have ears.

Pansy's hair is that soft shade of golden-red which all of us long for and so few of us have. Besides that, it's curly, which makes it even more envied. She says just now that some day she'd like to be a doctor, and lots of patients may some day be cheered by seeing such hair and Pansy's smile.

Josephine Holden

Jo is a very little girl. Sometimes we think maybe she has strayed over from Miss Allison’s school. But when it comes to a question of brain work or clothes, we know she’s a little girl in stature only. That girl with almost-but-not-quite-red hair, dressed in middy and bloomers and a serious expression, whom you see making a bee line from Chemistry Lab. to the Gym., is Harriet Hollinshead. But don't let that serious expression worry you, because it doesn't mean a thing. Stay around Harriet for a few minutes, and any blue-ish tendency you might have had will have disappeared. In addition to serving as President of Day Student Council the first semester and doing a few dozen other odd things, she finds time to be a Physical Ed. From the list of indoor sports to which Seniors are eligible Virginia has elected worrying. Often when we see her wandering about with that distressed look on her face, we wonder what has been "Little Mary's" latest escapade, for Virginia is one of these pretty girls, and one just has to watch out for them. It is generally conceded that Virginia spends some time studying. We wonder if she derived her conception of Empress Josephine from her reading of the archives of the French Empire?

ALICE ISABEL INGRAM

To begin with, Alice Iz has her picture in Milestones more times than has any other girl. Now, when you realize that she is a great deal more shy than bold and that she never obtrudes her personality on any one, you begin to realize what a remarkable girl she is. She is Ward-Belmont’s prize poet and artist. She is a girl one only finds—well, at least, is a blue moon.

There’s entirely too much to be said about Margaret to be written here, but we may be able to sketch enough of her life here to explain why she is one of the leading lights. She has been in school two years, and it did not take her longer than the first few weeks to be one of the outstanding girls here. She is a product of Oklahoma, always on the “qui vive,” despite a far-away, dreamy look in a pair of provocative blue eyes. Carol has about one of the heartiest laughs we know. She's a blonde girl from Wisconsin, has the health of the North within and without, rides a horse well, is witty, and is as good a sport as ever saw Ward-Belmont. Isn't that your idea of a good, true girl? She's ours, and how?

EDITH JONES

"In framing an artist, art hath decreed
To make some good, but others to exceed."

Knowing Edith and her artistic talents, we know that she is one of those who will certainly succeed. Then, too, she is our campus "sheik," which is no mean compliment. One can always find her the center of first one group and then another. She has that rare, almost undefinable thing, magnetism.

What is all this talk about gentlemen preferring blondes? Well, if there were many girls with hair like Delia’s, there certainly would be a valid reason for their slighting the brunettes. We are proud of our “Physical Ed.” this year, and Delia is one of the very top notches in our ladder. Her neighbors for these past two years give her as good a rating as she gets in “Gym.”

Edith went home for a wedding and caught the bride's bouquet. There's no telling what may happen now. Edna Loughridge

There is not a girl in school who has anything unpleasant or unkind to say about Edna Loughridge. She is a girl who really deserves the praise which the others give her. She has a Spanish look, which brings back the fact that history says the Spaniards were among the first people to seek their fortunes in Florida. She is quiet, but with that quiet interest in her friends which binds them to her.

Annie May McCauley

Annie May is a unique young female, who will work herself to a frazzle to do anything a wicked and plotting club president or committee chairman asks her to do. The meeting will please rise to give her a standing vote of admiration. Thank you. She and Betty are two of those most fortunate young things who get to dress up beautifully and go out to see the world every so often. Again she has our admiration.

MARGARET McMULLEN
Margaret has that sweet charm and dignity which all stories attribute to Southern girls. But there is more to her than just charm, for her executive ability is shown in the way she has managed the Osiron Club. Besides that, she has had time to do well in her art classes and to be part of nearly everything which goes on.

Osiron.
President Osiron Club.

ELIZABETH MARTIN
Betty has captured from the gods a lovely voice and a beautiful face. Now, we ask you, what could be better? It’s a pleasure to sing at vespers when Betty leads the singing. But during the week days her lot is not so peaceful. That English B would drive her mad were it not for the fact that she must save part of her mind to grapple with French D. And how we sympathize! O, how we sympathize!

Katherine McKee

Whom have we with us? Why, none other than McKee, famous all over campus for—well, 'most everything, from Student Council officer to horseback rider. Any time there is a hard job to be done it is always left to McKee, because every one knows that it will be done right. Pep, popularity, brains, good sportsmanship, wit—what else could you want?

Catherine McKnight

Compliments are so many and so diverse for Mac that we are at a loss just now which one to record. But we believe that she is one of our Seniors whom all will agree typifies the words "refinement" and "sincerity." Mac must have her Sunday out. Essential! Decidedly essential! We learned in Hygiene that plenty of fresh air is of vital importance in the life of the Ward-Belmont girl.

VIRGINIA MARTIN

Virginia is Madame Beziat's delight in French D. And if the child never did another thing in Ward-Belmont but shine in that turbulent French class, she would deserve a special chalk mark in the gallery of the immortals. But she does do other things, such as experimenting in mental telepathy, getting on the honor roll, and impressing us with her beautiful eyes.

A. K.

MARY MARTINI

We think that the University of Illinois deserves a vote of thanks for loaning us Mary for a year. She's of that rare and desirable species which produces a girl who trains and trains for her club team and is right there for every athletic event. By that you might guess that she has a little gang of friends who would swear by (not at) her if the occasion warranted, and who would make her room a good old congregating place—a Ward-Belmont salon.

T. C.
NATHALIE MAYNARD

We have our own little private idea of what an anemic, underslung person is, but Nathalie certainly isn't it. We dare say that (although she isn't Scotch) she'll rush bargain counters, and she has that grand off-hand manner that will make it seem like a triumph over the Spanish Armada. Shall we give her a rising vote of thanks for letting us know her? Robin Hood! Arise!

A. K.
General Proctor, '26.

ESTELLE MEGGS

A fine girl from Florida is friend Estelle. She loves a good time, talks enough to make her interesting, thinks there's nothing like college, and has the prettiest smile. Do you suppose that it is the Southern sun that is responsible for her smile, or is it a Sigma Nu?

A. K.
Treasurer Y. W. C. A.

DOROTHY MILLER

She may be little, but—O, my! Dot's right there, and every one knows it, for she's bubbling over with pep and fun. She is one of our loyal Chicagolites, as you have probably already heard; and we are so glad for her sake that Chicago isn't so terribly far from Champaign, 'cause Champaign does have its attractions, doesn't it, Dot?

T. C.

MARY MOORE

That Satanic look which Mary gets in those brown eyes! Well, just watch out for it; for when you see it there, something is going to be happening fast and furiously in just about a second. Ordinarily, Mary looks very solemn; but when her eyes sparkle, she's going to do something impulsive. When you think of "pep"—that's Mary.

Penta Tau.

Treasurer Texas Club.
RUTH MOORE

Ruth is a competent young person, who knows where she's going and why. She can charm both a Vanderbilt man and Mlle. Vimont; so you know she's an unusual girl. Ruth came here last year after she had already pledged at the University of Arkansas. Another sign of a girl who is different. But just maybe we're not glad she did come!

Penta Tau.
President Arkansas Club.
Secretary French Club.

MARY PEARL MOORES

"Choice gives us our friends." Fortunately, it gave us Mary Pearl; and if choice continues to be the determining factor, she will be our friend always. Isn't she a pretty curly-headed chrysanthemum? You need not be surprised, for Mary Pearl comes from the Land of Flowers. Since she is really a Tennessean, we wish she would come back "for keeps."

Agora.
ROSE MORRISON

Rose is the Ensemble girl, Ward-Belmont’s ideal; so what else can we say of her? The charming thing about Rose is that she doesn’t make of herself a haughty, far-away ideal; but, instead, she’s right down here on the campus with the rest of us, making life interesting. Satisfied?

Tri-K.
President Tri-K. Club.

MARJORIE MOSS

Marjorie wants to take this opportunity to tell you that she isn’t always a Y. W. President. Just to prove that she will not be the glowing example of the school, she has regularly attended Senior Hall monitors meetings—not as a monitor. Aside from several side interests, her specialties are keeping the Trouble family in good condition and in being every girl’s ideal of what a Senior should be.

X. L.
President Y. W. C. A.
PAULINE NEY

Polly Ney, at your service! She gets about the campus as if she enjoyed herself, instead of dragging from pillar to post with that hang-dog look so many of us have. She is truly pleasant and lovely to meet. For which rare and wonderful virtues we salute her a la francaise. It is a pleasure. Come again.

Agora.

MARY LOUISE NOOE

Nooe is the exception that proves the rule. You know the saying about preachers' children? Well, not all of them are, 'cause Mary Louise is one, and she's a good ole girl. This is her first year here, but you'd never know it, because she is one of those nice people who fits in. At present writing she is one of those desirous of long tresses. Long may it grow!

Digamma.
ALICE NOORDEWIERS

Alice comes up to us with that appealing air, as if to say, "Please like me!" Just as if we didn't, anyway! She is one of that terrifying gang of Senior Hall, the Third Floor Terrors, who have not yet achieved their prime aim in life, which seems to be to raise the roof straight up from Mrs. Charlie's mansion. Alice is one of those very, very lovely people (of whom there are few left by this time of the year) who are always glad to lend you a stamp. Up with her!

Osiron.

MAURINE OLINGER

"Got a package from home to-day," announces Maurine. Furthermore, she lets us in on all contained therein—a noble trait. And Maurine enjoys laughing with (not at) a person—noble trait number two. She's a good student—noble trait number three. A sufficiency for one girl.

Osiron.
ANNA PARRENT

"Fine eyes are to the face what eloquence is to speech." Take another look at this picture. Now, aren't you thoroughly convinced? You just get acquainted with those big, brown eyes, and you will know Anna, for with these and two years' experience in Expression, she can say almost anything. Anna labored under the complex of having had an older sister in Ward-Belmont. We wish to congratulate her, for success has finally crowned her brave efforts to follow the footsteps which were willed to her.

Beta.

IRENE PATTERTON

We all have our ideas of Miss Popularity, and does Irene fit yours? She does ours! Keep up that "rep" of getting three specials a day, Irene. But, then, with those snappy eyes and that curly black hair, it's a wonder she doesn't get six. But, anyhow, we can't help being jealous.

A. K.
Thelma Peck

We knew that Thelma could draw and could work at being vice president of a club, besides carrying her regular work; but maybe she didn't surprise us by blossoming out as an entertainer at the Tri-State Fair! Now, we'll expect to see Thelma juggling for her daily bread instead of drawing or teaching French, as we had once expected of her. But we must say something about Thelma's hair, too. It is that desirable color that one can never achieve with Golden-Glitz. You know.

X. L.
Vice President X. L. Club.

Anita Pettit

Anita not only has a friendly personality and a ready smile, but she also has a determined character. She can express her convictions, and she can write them. She's one of the Hyphen's bright lights. Whenever she decides on something she truly wants to do—watch out! For where there's a will, like Anita's, there's a way.

Tri-K.

NANCY RABENAU

Nancy made her collegiate début at Washington University, so she has been with us only a year—much to our sorrow. She is a real honor-roll student, even though "her heart is not in her work—'tis elsewhere." If you doubt this statement, ask her to prove the truth of this one: "Take away love, and our earth is a tomb." If she can't convince you, perhaps her candy and flowers can.

Del Vers.
Secretary Del Vers Club.

MARCIA REDINGER

Not many of us are so lucky as to have our mothers come all the way from Indiana just so that we can be day students. Marcia shines in chemistry, acting as if she really likes it; but her brilliancy is not confined to that line, so they say. There is masculine proof, if you doubt our statement.

Del Vers.
President Indiana Club, '26.
MARY JANE RICHARDS

Say, Jerry, it didn't seem right to have long flowing tresses, did it? Just couldn't resist cutting it again. Well, we all have our weaknesses—how about A. T. O.'s, Jerry? But one girl we know and admire doesn't have many. She wouldn't be the favorite of so many of us if she weren't an unusual being. "What? Well, not knowing, I'd hate like everything to say."

A. K.

President A. K. Club.

ELLEN ROBINSON

No one need speak for Ellen, for that is one thing which she does for herself with no urging. As for writing! The girl writes with what is truly a flowing pen. Dancing is another of her strong points, for she dances in a way which is Miss Jeter's pride and joy. And her vocabulary is fully as proficient as her dance steps, and as varied. There's no hope and no desire for sleep when Ellen is carrying on a conversation in the room.

Martha Edith Rogers

Hail to Galli-Curci, Schuman-Heink, and all the rest of them! For you think of the whole galaxy of opera stars when you listen to and talk to Martha Edith. Her voice is what she is thinking of most, and few of us can blame her. There seems to be little doubt that she has hitched her wagon to stardom and is traveling that way. With her pale complexion and her black, curly hair, she really looks the part; so she should get by the managers on two counts.

Del Vers.

Elizabeth Rogers

We expect that a certain well-known soap company is going to be requiring Betty's services after her graduation, and that in not many months she may be looking at us from billboards, adjuring us, if we don't want to lose everything worth having, "to keep that schoolgirl complexion." It is supposed to be rather wearing on the nerves to live with a coming opera star, but Betty's appearance has certainly not suffered, and her face shows no evidence of too close association with artistic temperament.

Del Vers.

Vice President Missouri Club.
Kathryn Rogers

A girl with lovely auburn hair, and enough talents to supply Santa Claus with designs and ideas, and melodies for music boxes for the rest of his life, is this young lady. Kat can make a piano talk, weep, laugh, or cry, and she is also an artist. She's pleasant and likeable. Can't imagine what more she'd need be.

Del Vers.
Secretary Y. W. C. A.

Mai Belle Sanders

Mai Belle is that tall girl with dark hair who looks as Aileen Pringle would like to if she could. Mai Belle is quiet—she doesn't have to talk, with those eyes—but when she does say something, it's liable to be funny. We remember one day, during lunch period, she—but that's another story. She is, they tell us, a shining Home Ec. student. Her pet peeve in life is that Doctor Hollinshead gives chemistry experiments that take three hours to perform (gentle sarcasm).

INEZ SCRUGGS

To get to Ward-Belmont, Inez had to come on a slow train through Arkansas. But she’s not a slow-train girl—no, sir! She can ride these darting, plunging Nashville trolleys with as much delight as if she had come from the mazes of the loop. She is one of those conscientious girls about whom one is always hearing, but whom one never sees. More power to her!

Osiron.

MARIAN SHERMAN

Sherman’s wit and cleverness have made her a well-known figure on the campus, and her triumphs are not confined just to school limits. She was allowed to sally forth into the city to make a hit at the Lions’ Club of Nashville, and she certainly did. As for dancing! Well, stroll down to the “Gym.” Most any night after dinner and you’re sure to see our little Georgian wonder “struttin’ her stuff.”

Agora.

President Agora Club.
Julia Smither

People often wonder why Ward-Belmont girls are so well dressed. It’s a secret. But listen: It’s due to the kindness of such girls as Julia who have enough good-looking clothes to help out us poor unfortunates. We like you so well, Julia, we are thinking of staying with you when you get out into life to see that you are not too unselfish. But that trait of yours is a mighty fine thing to have, Julia; maybe you’d better keep it, after all.

T. C.
Secretary T. C. Club.

Elizabeth Sudekum

Elizabeth is one of those girls who don't pretend, and is not given to talking about herself. She is the sort whom it is a little difficult to know well; but once known, one realizes it was worth the effort made to do it. There is not going to be much left about Domestic Art which she does not know after this year.

JEFFE SWAIN

Though our little blonde from the Mississippi Delta has found certain difficulty in managing conflicting affairs in several Vandy fraternities, we all admit she has done better than most of us could have. There seems to be a certain "he-man" just now. Her next write-up may reveal another, however. You are wise, Sooga, for you handle your books as well as you do your other affairs.

CYNTHIA TANNER

Cynthia looks like a heroine from a romantic novel, 'way back when they were gentle, lovely, and frail. She has that far-away look, so distant and gentle, that we can scarcely believe that her thoughts must be, like ours, on prosaic things like getting out of "Gym." or on getting into the tea room. But there is no affectation about Cynthia, even if she could "get away" with it. She's a noble P. G., so she could get away with almost anything.

A. K.
Phyrne Tanner

Phyrne was here part of last year, but she missed us so much that she could not resist coming back and bringing her sister with her this year. She, like Cynthia, is a tall, slender blonde—one of those most fortunate creatures who do not have to worry about calories at all. But it isn't because she never laughs that she doesn't grow fat, for she has that trait, pleasant to meet—a sense of humor.

A. K.

Valda Thomas

To see Valda on horseback, you almost say: "There goes a true Texan." She's anything but blasé, for she can get as excited and wrought up over things in which she is interested as one of the little girls in Miss Allison's department. That enthusiasm may be at the back of a number of things she has done so well this year. If she is not talking Penta Tau, it's Jo, Katy, or Margaret. How she has worked—well, nobody knows.

Penta Tau.
President Penta Tau.
Marjorie Tootle

Marjorie is a queen among us when it comes to real talent, for how that girl can sew! She is a second-year Domestic Art student; so she is unusually proficient in doing all those things which a girl should be able to do, and which so few girls can. Marge has another desirable possession, much coveted just now—long hair. And it is blonde, too, which arouses more envy.

Tri-K.

Susan Vaughn

Wherever one sees Susan, one also sees "wreathed smiles."

"Such as hang on Hebe's cheek,
    And love to live in dimple sleek."

For five years we have enjoyed them; so, needless to say, we will miss them in their absence. Susan's lovable disposition has won for her many friends, who have hopes of seeing her very often if they remain in Nashville, for she is a resident of "the Athens of the South."

Beta.
MARY DOROTHEA WALKER

Mary D. is always perfectly attired, from the even waves in her auburn hair to the smart ties on her sport Oxfords. She looks as if she might be the model for one of those Dobbs advertisements, so à la mode are her sport clothes. But Mary D. does not dress for golf and then play bridge all afternoon. She is an excellent sportswoman. In fact, she's our grand champion bowler.

F. F.

Manager Bowling.
Treasurer West Virginia Club.

GERTRUDE WAY

We heard some one say once that he would rather hear Gertrude talk than eat—and we know on authority that the some one who said that wasn't an enemy of food, either. Gertrude has a contagious laugh, a fine disposition, is charmingly frank, and knows a good joke when she meets it. What more dost v'ant, wee one?

A. K.

Vice President Kansas Club.
Wayne Weber

Wayne always knows all the news which is floating about school, and she knows how to tell it interestingly, which is another gift. She is a splendid person to be with, if you can get her started talking. Her one great trouble just now, leaving out English B, is getting her hair to grow, though she protests that it is doing very nicely.

Penta Tau.

Mable West

"M." stands for both Mabel and Modern. Our A B C's are perfectly correct on that point. Although Westie is so small, she is the last girl in school who would be lost in a crowd. Her littleness, her blondness, her exceptional attractiveness, are as well known at W.-B. as "Ae" itself. But, for all that blonde hair and those blue eyes, have you ever seen any one who could look more, on occasion, like a diabolic imp bent on stirring up mischief?

Penta Tau.

Proctor Senior Hall, '26.
Second Vice President Council, '27.
Augusta Williams

"Who is that striking-looking, dark-haired girl?" When any one asks us that question, we always look to see if Augusta is anywhere about. Usually she is. Another of Augusta's assets is her attractive Alabama accent, or drawl—or what you will. She is, to us, the ideal of the loveliest sort of Southern girl. She has that Southern charm that can only be inherited—never acquired.

F. F.
President F. F. Club.

Annie Elizabeth Williams

Elizabeth is the dependable type of girl who tries to avoid the limelight. But as one of her club sisters said, "She's the girl we turn to when there's a hard job to be done." All of which makes it nice for the club, but rather hard on Elizabeth. However, if she will make for herself such a fine reputation, the lesser mortals are going to use her. Of course by now you just know she's smart in her studies, too. She is.

X. L.
Ruth Wingart

Ruth believes that a pair of hands can be used very effectively when one is talking, and she puts her theory into practice when she competes with the Hyphen in supplying South Front with news. She is one of the few people who can be sophisticated and yet be liked by everyone. We are assured of her popularity by the number of friends she is leaving behind her at Ward-Belmont.

F. F.
Secretary West Virginia Club.

Thelma Witwer

Thelma also returned for the last quarter, but she is to finish work on her General Diploma. Thelma is the rather tall, rather blonde, rather retiring new Senior, who looks as if she'd make a wonderful friend. At any rate, we'll have to find out.

X. L.
CHARLOTTE WETTACH

Charlotte seems to inhabit a world of her own and just come down to see us every once in a while. But between deciding whether or not she’s engaged and reliving all her exciting experiences in Europe last summer, the poor girl does have plenty to occupy her thoughts. However, Charlotte hasn’t deserted us entirely, for she is still able to write reams for the Hyphen, make grades worthy of the name, and giggle in a manner unique in the annals of Ward-Belmont.

T. C.
Hyphen Reporter, ’27.

ELLEN YOHE

Ellen is one of those very pretty girls who always look exquisite. She can make her church regulation outfit look as attractive as any smart creation from Paris. (And to be able to do that is to be able to do something.) Ellen came to Ward-Belmont as a Senior, but she has made herself such an indispensable part of the class that we can’t remember—nor do we care to remember—when she was not with us.

X. L.
Dorothy Veasey

Veasey is one of those energetic young females who dash about helping Miss Morrison by taking Gym numbers and seeing that budding young athletes turn square corners. All this because Veasey is a second-year Physical Ed. More power to her! Veasey, besides being a hockey player, is a toe dancer. Speaking of versatility—!

T. C.

Frances Lou Vinson

An efficiency expert would glory in Frances Lou. She knows just how to do everything, from placing an ink bottle in its most advantageous position on a desk to pulling a blue hat to its most advantageous position over curly blonde hair. She has enough practical sense for two or three ordinary folks—but, O! those blue eyes and that come-hither look! It's a gift!

JUNIOR MIDDLE POEM

By Josephine Cooper

Four years ago we came here,
And entered these portals dim and gray.
Our dreams were silver fantasies,
Misty things, tinted with rose,
Which veiled the buildings tall
And made them look
Like fairy castles in the air.
But time went on,
As time is wont to do,
And, with the dullness of reality
Of work and grind and study,
Changed our gorgeous fantasies
To dim, vague aspirations
Of uncertain form and hue.
And now, when our footsteps are turning
And finished is our race,
We'll take something worth while with us,
Though another class takes our place.
We'll take those aspirations
Which in these years of toil
Have shaped themselves anew—
We'll take those ideals with us,
And give thanks, Ward-Belmont, to you.

No, the Second-Year College Class is not traveling for its health. We, too, have definite goals toward which we are advancing. On this trip the majority of Ward-Belmont students have been following certain routes; but we are different, for we follow only those courses which especially interest us.

We, the First-Year College Class, have thoroughly enjoyed this trip. We have been good travelers, and we recommend this instructive journey as an interesting adventure. We guarantee that it will be equally amusing for both flappers and bookworms. Just now we are looking forward to next year, when we will no longer travel second-class, but first.
This year has served to show us just how much we don’t know and how much there is of this tour of Ward-Belmont which we have not seen. Next year we shall see much more, when we shall be in the Junior Middle section of this train seeking knowledge, and incidentally there is much more to be heard of this group of sight-seers.

Of course we have made lots of noise in the chapel section of this tour, but that does not mean that we aren't enjoying it—it may mean that we enjoy it more than some of the quieter, more demure maidens. Another pleasant feature is that we are not as blase as to the chapel speakers as are some of the elder travelers.

The inhabitants of the Land of Ward-Belmont come to it from the many outlying provinces or States you see shaded in the map above. There are twenty-two different State clubs in Ward-Belmont, which means that these states sent enough girls here so that a strong, active club might be formed. Several other States are also represented here, but they have not enough representatives that a club may be formed. The purpose of the State clubs is to give all the girls from a certain state an opportunity to become well acquainted with one another. Each club, either alone or in a group with other clubs, gives a dance in the spring. These dances are most attractive, and range all the way from the representatives of a State Fair to the representation of an Indian village by moonlight.

Sophocles' "Electra" was presented at the Parthenon on November 4, 1926, by the students in the Expression Department, under the direction of Miss Townsend. The costumes and properties were authentic. The production was staged as nearly as possible in the manner of the Greek drama in the time of Sophocles, the fourth century B.C. "Electra" was produced again on May 17, at the request of the Nashville Park Board.

HE Ward-Belmont School of Music maintains the largest, most expensive, and most gifted faculty of any school for girls in the country. The teachers have supplemented graduation from leading conservatories with years of special study under the leading masters of two continents.

Mr. Lawrence Goodman, director of the Piano Department, is an American who has had superlative opportunities for study, both in this country and in Europe. For eight years he was a pupil of Ernest Hucheson. Then, going to Europe, he studied with Joseph Lhevinne, the great Russian artist. He has attended the Master School for Pianists, conducted by Ferruccio Busoni at Basle, Switzerland, and has studied with Segismund Stojowski, the friend and pupil of Paderewski.

Mr. Goodman taught in one of New York's leading music schools for five years, but enlistment in the navy and return to civilian life brought about readjustments that enabled Ward-Belmont to prevail upon him to come here. He has been with the school for seven years, and the rapid progress of his pupils is sufficient proof of his ability.

Signor Gaetano Salvatore De Luca, director of the Voice Department, is a distinguished Italian vocal authority. He is a teacher of successful experience in New York and Milan, Italy, and a master of the Italian Bel Canto. He has studied with the most famous teachers in Europe, including Maestri Baraldi and Piazza, of London; the distinguished Maestro Corrado, of Naples; Professor Carelli, head of the Vocal Department of the Conservatory of Naples; Maestro Manderioli, of Milan; and Maestro Lombardi, of Florence. He took a special course in operatic répertoire from the eminent conductor, Professor Sarimento (Caruso's coach), and revived several operas, notably "L'Africaine" and "Andrea Chenier," with the celebrated tenor, De Lucia.

Signor De Luca was chosen not only because of his reputation as an artist, but upon the urgent recommendation of many celebrated authorities, who praise his abilities as a teacher of tone production, répertoire, and opera. He has been connected with Ward-Belmont for eight years, and enjoys the high distinction of having recently placed one of his pupils, Joseph T. MacPherson, in the Metropolitan Opera Company with a little more than three years' study with him.

Mr. Kenneth Rose's eight years of experience at Ward-Belmont have been marked by notable musical achievements. Annually he has given a brilliant open program at the school, and he has appeared with success in other cities over the State. The Ward-Belmont Orchestra, numbering about forty players, he has carried on and developed to its present efficient standard. It now ranks among the best orchestras of its kind in the South.

Having an ardent love of his work, Mr. Rose brings to his teaching an inspiration to which his pupils quickly respond. The evidence of his skill as a teacher is expressed best in the success won by his pupils.
One hundred seventeen
The Ward-Belmont Orchestra, one of the most efficient school organizations in the country, was founded by Fritz Schmitz in 1908. Since 1918 the ensemble has been under the guidance of Kenneth Rose, director of the Violin Department of Ward-Belmont, who has developed this body of students and young professionals to symphonic proportions both in the completeness of its instrumentation and the artistry of its performances. Many members of the Nashville Symphony Orchestra are present or past members of this smaller body. The repertory includes all the standard overtures, movements of the well-known symphonies, such as the Tchaikowsky No. 4 (Finale), Schubert’s Unfinished, etc. With its function, that of superior training for aspiring students, the Ward-Belmont Orchestra is contributing in a most helpful way to the artistic development of the South.

DOMESTIC ART

The sewing classes are proving very versatile. Some of the girls are making breakfast coats; some are making children's clothes; others are learning how to trim garments successfully. In preparation for the department's annual style show, the girls have been working on various types of dresses—simple sport dresses, tailored dresses, and afternoon dresses. The style show will be the culmination of a year of worth-while accomplishment, and will be educational as well as interesting. Not only will one see the Ward-Belmont girls in the dresses they have made, but, as an added feature, period costumes will be shown.
DOMESTIC SCIENCE

The cooking classes this year have carried out an interesting and diverse program. Beginning with plain foods, the girls have learned how to plan and make well-balanced, appetizing meals. Gradually more advanced work has been taken up, until the students know all the intricacies of planning, buying materials, cooking, and serving more complex and elaborate meals. The enthusiastic girls now serve weekly luncheons to teachers and other guests who are fortunate enough to be invited; and, indeed, those who go are fortunate, for the luncheons are perfect in every detail of cookery and etiquette.
WARD-BELMONT ABROAD

These girls are climbing an Alpine glacier, and enjoying it as they enjoyed every minute of last summer's Ward-Belmont tour. They had no dull hours; for how could they, when Miss Ross was with them to tell them the romance of the past and to inspire them with an appreciation of the truly beautiful? Their days were packed full of interest: exquisite cathedrals; drives along the unbelievably blue Mediterranean; audiences with guides, tradesmen, counts; trips on foot, by motor, in gondolas; shopping expeditions to haggle with brow-beaten Italians. The nights were spent at operas, theaters, and night clubs, or in taking moonlight drives. They saw humorous things, as the ludicrous foreign movies; touching things, as Hoffman's "Christ;" miraculous things, as the Sacred Stairway, where all sins are forgiven. They were stirred by the Lake Country of England, the Trosachs of Scotland, the green vistas of Holland. No one girl but feels the richer for her contact with the old and new as they exist together in Europe. Each has thoughts of scenes from old castle windows, from the top of St. Peter's, from swiftly moving trains. Every one regrets that such a delightful summer is past, but one consoles herself always with a crowd of happy memories.

SOCIAL CLUBS

For ten years the social clubs of Ward-Belmont have played their part in making our school one of the finest in the land. Not only have they been a source of fun and pleasure, but they have taught us the lesson of cooperation and the value of friendship.

Those of us who are artistically inclined find our interest held by the delightful possibilities of the new club houses, while we who are athletic have the opportunity of showing our club spirit in the inter-club tournaments. The dances call for the ingenuity and skill of every member, as they are the occasion of much friendly rivalry in talent and originality. As these dances are the chief social functions of the year, we have used in the following section descriptions of them.
At the Cinderella Ball, which the members of the Agora Club gave, there were no maidens who were disturbed by a fear of the striking of the clock, for the guests and hostesses were care-free. The gym was decorated as a gorgeous castle, with the throne of the King and Queen at the end of the long room. During the special feature the prince and princess gave a dance, in which the princess, true to the story, lost her slipper.

People say that peacocks are bad luck, but the A. K.'s seem to have found the charm which dispels the misfortune, for their Peacock Dance was a decided success. The gym was decorated in soft yellow; the walls and ceiling draped in such a way as to give a graceful, billowing effect. The special dance was given by a chorus of girls, with peacock head dresses and long painted wings, with the solo dancer wearing a yellow dress and a long peacock feather in her hair. As favors, small perfume bottles in the shape of peacocks were given.

The gym became a lovely, cool, green forest for the Anti-Pandora Dance. Pandora's box was there, and it was finally opened, releasing Winds who airily danced over the gym. Pandora and her friends tried to restrain them, but not until they had finished their boisterous dancing were they to be held.

A Blue Moon Dance was given by the Del Vers Club in a gym decorated appropriately for the arrival of the rare “Lady of the Blue Moon.” Walls and ceiling, draped in soft blue shades, greeted the Lady when she emerged from the big silver moon which shone from one end of the room. Every girl at the dance received a little silver vase in memory of the Lady of the Blue Moon.

The Steamship F. F. took the guests for a round-the-world tour. Welcomed to the ship by the captain, the guests heard an orchestra playing on the upper deck for the dancers. When the ship came to France, the captain introduced two Apache dancers; at Gibraltar came Spanish dancers; in China there were Chinese boys and girls who also danced for the travelers.

The Osirons chose a revue to open the Osiron Orchid Room. The guests danced until the intermission, when a pony ballet came on the scene. “The Girl is You and the Boy is Me” immediately became the song hit of the campus after the Osiron Dance. The Osiron Orchestra captivated the audience, and was talked of for days afterwards. The closing number was another feature which was unusual and attractive, as two couples in white satin see-sawed to the strains of a dreamy waltz.

The Empress Josephine and Emperor Napoleon were the hostess and host of the Penta Tau's Dance. The gym had become the elaborate ballroom of Versailles, inclosed with draperies of rose and silver leading up to the ceiling, from which came a chandelier of pink roses. In compliment to the royal pair, richly dressed nobles and ladies danced. There was a large throne at one end of the room, where the Emperor and Empress were seated.

Christmas spirit reigned at the T. C. Dance, for the gym looked like a bit of the farthest north, with snow and evergreens in every direction. The King and Queen of Wintertime were there, too, announced by handsome trumpeters, dressed in white satin and followed by a royal cortege, all in white. For a special feature, a tiny dancer appeared and danced amid falling snowflakes, while colored lights played upon her graceful figure. Then, with the aid of two snowmen, she rolled out a huge snowball, which was opened and brought more and more snowballs on the scene.

The gym was turned into Fairyland for the Tri-K Dance. A huge lighted ball hung from the center of the room, where the color scheme was black and white, with gaily colored balloons flying about. Suspended from the balcony were large panels bearing silhouettes of Pierrot and Pierrette—the gay spirits who were the patrons of the Tri-K Dance. A tableau was given against a black panel as the special dance number, with a toe dance by one of the members.

The X. L.'s gave their traditional Oriental Dance this year. Guests entered through a rustic arch, which was covered with cherry blossoms, into a lovely Japanese scene. At the far end of the gym, dominating the entire scene, sat the majestic Buddha. Over the room were foot bridges, cherry blossoms, and shrubs. Through it all the silver moon shone, while there was a fragrance of incense permeating everything. Guests were given sandalwood boxes, carrying out the Oriental idea, which was also shown in the Japanese girls' dance.

HOLIDAYS

LIKE every other country, the country of Ward-Belmont has special holidays and celebrations. These begin with the reception given by the Social Clubs in the fall, for the new girls, and end with the All-Club Dinner, which is given the last evening that we are here in the spring.

The All-Club Reception is a miracle of new evening dresses, handshaking, and friendliness. Each club holds open house, and each club labors and toils over making its reception so lovely that every new girl will be sure that that particular club is the only one for her. It's a great time, for it's the time when the first strangeness of being away at school is entirely dissipated, and each girl discovers herself as an integral part of the school life.

Not long after this comes the next big event of the year, the Halloween Dinner. Suddenly chills go up and down our backs as the dim lights cast flickering shadows and form grotesque figures about us. We slip into our places at the table and shudder at the very thought of eating "petrified eyeballs" and tombstones. As we are eating, we are suddenly surprised and delightfully horrified by the ghostly procession which is gliding in and out the tables, clanking chains, making weird sounds. For some minutes we are kept in a state of shivering expectancy, and then, to our great relief, it slips mysteriously away, leaving us once more in peace.

Then comes Thanksgiving Day, perhaps the most enjoyable day in all the year. Until eleven o'clock in the morning the campus is alive with girls dashing here and there, some with letters, some with telegrams, some with call slips, and others with packages or flowers. But at eleven o'clock everybody attends the devotional service in the chapel. During the first part of the afternoon the driveway is filled with taxis and private automobiles, some bringing parents, some taking delighted girls away for drives. Then, too, there were many who go in the school parties to the Vanderbilt-Sewanee football game or to a matinee down town; so that by three o'clock the school is practically deserted. It might be difficult for one to imagine Ward-Belmont girls as Puritan maidens, but, nevertheless, dinner time finds the dining room filled with charming white-capped and white-kerchiefed maids, who are greatly enjoying the delicious dinner and discussing enthusiastically the happenings of the day.

After Christmas come the celebrations of George Washington's Birthday and of May Day, but more of them later on. The very last social event of the year, which takes place on the night before we leave for home, is the All-Club Dinner. It is a more or less sad affair, in spite of the flowers and songs and the enthusiasm of each club's vieing with the others to make its section of the dining room the most attractive. For the Seniors it is the last time all the old school friends will be together, ever; but for the other girls it is more just a charming dinner, a brilliant affair to remember until the next autumn will find them back at school.

Virginia Rowland Farmer - May Queen
MAY DAY

Of the holidays which are scattered throughout our school year, none is more beautiful and more festive than May Day. Tradition has set aside the last Monday in May as the day on which the Ward-Belmont girls celebrate according to the old English custom. It is a day on which the Seniors are given places of honor and prominence. The May Queen is chosen from their number, and her classmates comprise her court. On the day of the May festival the entire school assembles on the campus to dance around the May Pole and make merry for their own pleasure and that of a crowd of friends and Nashville guests.
Myrtle Carter, as Martha, and Rose Morrison, as George, led the assembly of colonial dames and dandies at the Colonial Ball and dinner on the evening of February 22. At six o'clock on that evening there echoed through Recreation Hall the strains of the “Minuet in G,” and down the winding stairway came the chosen George and Martha with their attendants. Majestically they passed by the admiring groups into the dining room with the other ladies and gentlemen. After dinner, in accordance with the custom, a group of Seniors danced a stately minuet before Martha and George; and then the orchestra struck up a modern tune, and all joined in the dancing.
Finding redbud on a mauve sky
Too great beauty to be borne
Inactively,
I betake myself out
To see what the sun has wrought.

Treetops are far misty green
Against the gray sky;
Branches and twigs of unawakened trees
Cross and recross
In black lacy bewilderment.

Dogwood blossoms are great flakes of snow
Suspended in falling;
They hold themselves wide,
Gratefully receiving the sky.

Pale yellow narcissi
Bear themselves proudly,
Scorning brown earth
Whence they have come.

On such a day
Beauty is everywhere.
This is the best of Spring,
When she withholds herself,
Scattering shy largesse,
Giving shy promise
Of what is to come.
September 16.  Arrive at Ward-Belmont. The new travelers were feeling like atoms, while the old ones were acting like "lords of creation."

September 17.  Matriculation. Long lines of weary girls asking many foolish questions!

September 19.  Seniors receive privileges. The campus was hardly big enough to hold the "privileged Seniors" that day.

September 25.  All-Club Reception. Weary hostesses wondering if the lines of new girls were endless!

September 27.  Pledge Day. Excitement reigned supreme among both new and old club members.

October 1.  Fag Day. We didn't know the old girls had such ingenious minds!

October 2.  Initiation. The beautiful solemnization of that ceremony so dear to the heart of every club member.

October 8.  National Chamber of Commerce visited us. Real men—and lots of them, too!

October 11.  Peanut Week. Such mysterious packages as were found unexpectedly all that week! Cheers for the "Y."

October 13.  Dr. Vincent’s lectures on English Life and Letters During the Regency. We look forward to Dr. Vincent’s coming again next year.

October 14.  Will Rogers, entertainer. And we cheered him six hundred strong when he spoke of our well-chaperoned dates in the "hail of a hundred mirrors."

October 16.  Hyphen Recognition. We reduced our bank accounts to the last nickel to support that fine Hyphen Staff.

October 20.  Senior Recognition. What strange thoughts filled our heads as we wondered where the next year would find each beloved Senior.

October 29.  Class Recognition. May each year see the fulfillment of that pledge to "transmit our school, not worse, but bigger, better, and more beautiful than it was transmitted to us."

October 30.  Halloween Dinner. Was our party spooky? Ask the ghosts!

November 1.  Bishop of London at the War Memorial Building. His talk interested us, because it was about us.

November 3.  Pavley-Aukrainsky Ballet and "Nomiko San." We try to appreciate high-class opera, but we can't understand what's said! So, of course, we enjoyed the dancing more.

November 4.  "Eletra" at the Parthenon. Could you believe that our c'assmates could be so wonderfully transformed into Greek maidens simply by instruction from Miss Townsend?

November 25.  Puritan Dinner. It would have been fun to have lived in the days of Priscilla and John Alden!

November 26.  Lucrezia Bori. And she gave us—us alone—an encore!

December 7.  Senior Open House. Did the Seniors feel their importance? O, no!!

December 15.  Club Christmas Parties. Do you suppose the Orphans enjoyed those toys any more than we did?

December 16.  Miss Townsend’s Plays. A very delightful parting gift!

December 17.  Home going! The name itself is sufficient.

January 5.  Return to school. What trophies we all had to show off! How many frat pins did you count?

January 25-29.  Exams. 'Nuff said!

February 2.  Basketball Championship Game. Of course the Tri-K.'s couldn't loosen their hold on that cup. And now it's theirs for keeps!

February 4.  Bowling Championship. The X. L.’s were worthy of their name. How they did "x-cel!"

February 14.  Valentine Party by Second-Year Girls for Seniors. Although Cupid's darts were not flying around, all his other toys were there.

Two hundred eight
February 15. Drama Week Celebration. Did you know that in school there were rich old ladies, office boys, and Jewish florists?

February 18. Gigli Concert. Gigli is the kind of artist we all can appreciate.

February 22. George Washington Dinner. You can’t kid me! Time did turn back that night when we saw George and Martha.

February 25. Canadian Booster Club. And a good time was had by all!

March 1. Baby Peggy’s Visit. She really was just all black hair and eyes.

March 6. Ben Scoval, entertainer. He made us laugh and cry at the same time—that’s why we all loved him!

March 7. Muscle Shoals Trip. Tired, but happy, we walked all over Alabama!

March 9. MILESTONES Stunt. Did you know before that day that some books are alive?

March 17. MILESTONES Dinner. It’s good method to feed us and ask for money afterwards.

March 24. Ward-Belmont Orchestra. I’ll bet that many of the members of our Orchestra will some day be members of well-known symphony orchestras.

March 31. Senior Free Day. Here’s to the Seniors! They richly deserve having one day free.

April 12. Senior-Senior Middle Banquet. Robin Hood’s entertainment held us all spell-bound for an hour or so.

April 22. MacPherson’s Concert. We were some proud to claim that he was from Ward-Belmont.

May 7. Horse Show. Almost felt like we might be at a Texas rodeo!

May 12. Senor De Luca’s Opera. We didn’t know we had our own Metropolitan Opera Company, did we?

May 17. We again revert to the Greek. “Electra” is most beautiful.

May 29. Baccalaureate Sermon. It did seem strange to think that the Seniors were spending their last Sunday in Ward-Belmont.

May 30. May-Day Festival. The gay dancers and the picturesque Maypoles brought to us the full picture of May Day.

June 1. High School Commencement. Our “Junior Middles!”

June 2. College Commencement and Home Going. The “thrillingest” of all thrilling days.
"OI, OI, OI, ABIE, SEE DA CONTEST"

Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Morenski were at home. Sweet essence of ham created part of the necessary atmosphere; Abraham's pipe did the rest. They both rocked back and forth in their respective chairs, making a touchdown one minute and losing a few yards the next. Each had a piece of the Jerusalem Times clutched tightly. Suddenly Rachael's face became a proverbial "wreath of smiles," and, with much gesticulating, she enthusiastically blurted: "Oi, Oi, Oi, Abie, see da contest de peppuls vot I know; see, Abie, see da winners of da contest!" Dis iss vot Abie saw:

THE DIARY OF MISTRESS
BELLE WARD

APRIL 3—Wednesday.
Arose at ten and had to rush like everything to get downtown and have breakfast in time to meet Bob and drive out to the club for lunch.
Danced most all afternoon, and then had to come out to school for French class. Hadn't studied a sniff, but that never keeps me from making a brilliant recitation.
There were some awfully cute Chi Phi's out for dinner, and we danced up in Wreck until about eleven. Not very exciting, though; so I came home and studied a bit.

APRIL 4—Thursday.
Had a breakfast date with an awfully cute S. A. E. friend of the roomy, but did not stay down town long, as I had two classes. Inasmuch as I had my lessons, I decided I might as well favor my dear teachers with my presence.
Got some gorgeous roses from Jim and a box of candy from Ike. Can't understand the sudden extravagance; but, anyway, it was appreciated.
Mary Padgett had a dinner dance to-night, and, of course, a "good time was had by all."

PERSONALS

Miss Katharine Amos, General Preceptor, with her partner, led the Junior Prom at Vanderbilt last Friday evening. Miss Amos reports a lovely evening, and was ready to resume her studies the following morning.
The entire Phi Delta Theta Fraternity of Vanderbilt were guests of the Penta Tau's at tea, Saturday evening. Miss Mills and Miss Greenlee received the guests.
The Misses Valda Thomas, Margaret Bradley, Alice Goulding, and Margaret Dixon had lunch at the Andrew Jackson, Tuesday.
Miss Carroll L. Cruse left Tuesday for Ann Arbor to attend the Junior Week dances at the University of Michigan.

ROPE-JUMPING TOURNAMENT

Of interest to the entire school is the recent rope-jumping tournament between the various academic departments. Points were gained by the number of jumpers-out and by the places won. The tournament was won by the French Department, with Madame Bizet holding high score. The list of winners follows:

Endurance:
1. Miss Gunn, French Department.
2. Miss Hawks, Administration.
3. Dr. Hollinshead, Science Department.

High Water:
1. Miss Scrogg, English Department.
2. Madame Bizet, French Department.
3. Mrs. Paskell, Home Department.

Hot Pepper:
1. Madame Bizet, French Department.
2. Mrs. Rose, Home Department.
3. Miss Temple, English Department.

Double Dutch:
1. Miss Blythe, Music Department.
2. Miss Sisson, Athletic Department.
3. Mademoiselle Viment, French Department.

THE HALL OF FAME

We nominate the following to the Hall of Fame (not saying what kind of fame):
Mr. Barton—for so cleverly managing his glasses during his chapel talks.
Vito's Orchestra—because they are practically the only representatives of the male persuasion privileged to see all the "Specials" at the Saturday-night dances.
Isabel Corr—for her undying devotion and her love for Ward-Belmont.
Miss Morrison—for being the proud possessor of the look that kills.
Bill Clark—for her mincing walk.
Edythe Dixon—for being the successful rival of Lon Chaney in making the face seem what it is not.
Caroline Cosgrove—for having been the most tactful girl in school.
Martha Edith Rogers—for that baby stare.
Marie Northrup and Genie Selden—for being everywhere at the same time.

EASTER PROM

The Annual Easter Prom was held Monday, April 18, from ten till two o'clock. Wreck Hall was beautifully decorated with spring flowers.
Paul WhitMan's twelve-piece orchestra played in the Y. W. Room, while dancing was enjoyed on the roof garden and in Wreck Hall.
The grand march was led by Miss Edith Leavens and Mr. Hartwell Hughes, Miss Leavens wearing an elaborate frock made in bouffant style. The favors were distributed by the little Misses Jane Barton and Anne Townsend. The gentlemen received unique-shaped cigarette cases, with the Ward-Belmont seal on them. The girls received Doreens of the same description.
The Prom was voted a success this year, and a good time was had by all.

THINGS THEY NEVER SAY

Miss Mills: “Now, it is our rule never to allow the girls to attend the Vanderbilt dances; but, of course, we’ll gladly make an exception of you, dear.”

Miss Morrison: “Swing the clubs carelessly, girls; it makes the drill so much more graceful.”

Madame Beziat: “Just say it in English; it’s so much easier for you.”

Miss Shackelford: “O, what a cute painting!”

Miss Rhea: “I have decided to exclude examinations from my History course.”

Mrs. Polk: “I’ve never had such a brilliant class—all A students.”

Mr. Barton: “Now, enjoy your mail, while I give you the latest report of the war in China.”

Miss Ashburner: “I’m coming up to third floor to-night, girls; so save some food.”

Miss Leavell: “Cultivate a piercing shriek, so that every one may hear what you have to say.”

Mrs. Charlton: “Yes, the shopping lists are made up, but I’ll arrange a special party to accommodate you.”

Miss Rucker: “I don’t think salts would agree with you.”

Member of Council: “Come on; let’s walk a mile for one.”

Chapel Monitor: “I’ll have some Juicy Fruit, thank you.”

General Monitor: “Those new five-inch heels will be just the thing for church this spring.”

Hall Monitor: “Take your time, girls. It’s only 10:15—the evening is just beginning.”

The Girls: “Why, we wouldn’t think of wearing rouge or lipstick, even if we were allowed to.”

THIRTY MINUTES WITH BARTON

Scene
Ward-Belmont's ultra-modern auditorium, buzzing with a sound which is highly suggestive of the arena where Nero persecuted the Christians.

Dramatis Personæ
Dr. Blanton—our beloved absent-minded professor.
Mr. Barton—official broadcaster of Station C-H-A-P-E-L.
Miss Morrison—a powerful Katrinka, in sooth in brain if not in brawn.
Miss Boyer—who strives unceasingly to teach us the latest jazz.
Mr. Wesson—her apt accompanist, who, modern in extreme, wears one of those William Tell ties (you know the kind—pull the bow and hit the apple).

We, the multitude, the necessary accessories to a perfect chapel program. Invited and expected to attend.

Time
Daily at Ten Bells

The Faculty saunter in and make for their accustomed seats. Miss Morrison puts an end to all the noise by requesting that all those who have spoken since entering meet with her for a few minutes after chapel. Mr. Barton announces the hymn, Miss Boyer trips gaily to the center of the stage, and Mr. Wesson unobtrusively appears from nowhere, steps on the starter, shifts gears, and, with a few excusable back-firings, is off.

After the hymn is duly rendered, we resume our seats with much scraping of feet. Mr. Wesson retires with an air of martyrdom, after having favored us, the multitude, with an ingratiating grin.

Mr. Barton steps forward rather obviously, casts his eyes (you just know he has them) on us, the multitude, picks them up and casts them again. He fumbles with his handkerchief, his watch, his spectacles, and his thoughts, and proceeds with unusual oratory:

"I wish to state concisely the affairs in China, so that you will be better prepared to vote at the next presidential election, which will come sometime within the next four years. It seems that the daughter of an American resident in China playfully pounded a nail into the flesh of a little Chinese companion. The Chinese father, refusing to realize that it was only a childish prank, struck the American across the face with his queue. The American forces have, of course, been called out to avenge the insult to an American citizen. This, briefly stated, is the situation.

"Now, we have with us the latest masterpiece of our national artist, Bud Fisher. The title of the picture is, "Two Negroes Shoveling Coal in a Dark Cellar."

(This is an oil reproduction of the picture, which we want to share with our readers because of its prominent place among the masterpieces of the world.) Miss Ross, who could more ably discuss this picture with you than I can, found it necessary to go down to the Wholesale House this morning to buy another order of passports for the girls going to Europe with her this summer; so we shall have to postpone discussion of the picture until another morning."

Mr. Barton resumes his seat, and Dr. Blanton ambles up to the front of the platform. A blush of youthful modesty surmounts his brow as he starts to speak, hesitates, then starts again, and at last boldly proceeds:

"We are planning a very delightful trip for you this week-end to Notre Dame to the Junior Prom. We shall have a special train with parlor cars and smoking rooms; so you need not fear any inconvenience en route. Gentlemen escorts will be provided to

Two hundred thirteen assure you of an enjoyable evening at the dance. All of you who wish to go, please file with Miss Nellums."

Dr. Blanton retires (now listen here: you know we mean exits), amidst wild exclamations of joy from the preps, who have not yet learned the art of retaining at all times that expression of blase nonchalance which the Seniors so admirably register.

Miss Morrison silences the hysterical outburst by coyly raising an admonishing forefinger. "Girls, I have only a few announcements this morning. Miss Mills complains that so few girls are filing for dates in the club houses that it doesn't warrant leaving the lights on in all of them every night; so after this please request your boy friend to bring his own flashlight. And just one other thing. The girls in the beauty parlors at Castner-Knotts have objected to your smoking while having your facials. They say that inhaling so much smoke is injurious to their lungs."

She dismisses the Faculty with a vehement nod of the head, and they, like orphans escaping from an institute, scamper hither and yon and yon and hither, and at last disappear. Miss Morrison smiles at us benignly, and we, too, are gone ere her eyelids have flickered open.

"A LITTLE BIT OF LOVE GOES A LONG WAY"
HE 8 o'clock bell rings with its usual fervor, and within five minutes the apt students of Miss Ross start to pour into her classroom. Sleepingness registers in all but a few faces; the few are given to yawning audibly or stretching. Two stragglers appear at the door, and soon settle themselves, having claimed the attention of the class with much scraping of feet and a few other antics. Gum popping ensues for a time.

8:10-8:15—and the patter of feet. Feet? Yes, the feet of Miss Ross.

“Good morning, Miss Ross!”

“Uh-huh, roll been called yet?” (Business of looking for a place to put her coat and scarf)

Miss Lightfoot (taking a book from the desk): “Banfield—Clark—Cruse,” etc.

“Every one here? Ready? Where’s Finnup? O, yes! Why don’t you sit up and let me know that you’re here, Miss Finnup? Every one awake? (Humph!) Let’s see. What’s our lesson for to-day? Who do we have for to-day, young ladies? Here! Wake up! All right—Miss Martin, you tell us.”

Miss Martin tells Miss Ross as gracefully as she can that we are in the act of reading Shelley.

“Mr. Shelley, is it? O, yes! I have it marked. Miss Rhodes—I mean Miss Jones. (Humph!) What’s the matter with Mr. Shelley, Miss Rhodes?”

Process of telling Miss Ross what she told us a week ago.

“Too full of figures, is he, Miss Rhodes? (Humph!) Don’t you like it? Class, what’s the matter with Mr. Shelley? Come on, wake up, volunteers! I don’t know what I’m going to do with you girls! Mr. Shelley doesn’t stay on the earth. That’s it, isn’t it? Do we all like Mr. Shelley? He soars, his words have wings, and the music flows. Isn’t that it? Pretty good, isn’t it, young ladies?” We all nod vehemently.

“Where are some good figures? They’re everywhere—s’here, ’n s’here, ’n s’here, ’n s’here. (Humph!) Where does he say the same thing? Class? Girls, have you read this poem? Why don’t you talk? Don’t be bashful. (Humph!) Now, class? Any one?”

Mutterings in various tones are heard all over the room, and soon Miss Ross hears an imaginary voice answering the question correctly. “Who said that? Miss Way? Well, why didn’t you say that before?” She reads from “Adonais:”

“The quick dreams,
The passion-winged ministers of thought,
Who were his flocks—”

What were ‘his flocks,’ Miss Scruggs?

“His sheep, Miss Ross.” (Great snickerings around the class.)

“Now, Miss Scruggs, you knew better than that. (Humph!) That’s an elaborate figure, but it’s perfectly clear what we mean, isn’t it, young ladies? (Humph!) Some one painted a fine picture that just expresses that thought.” Process of searching for picture goes on. At last she finds a Hogarth in with the Michael Angelos. Holds up picture, and we all gasp in admiration.

“See here, young ladies, this curve—it’s s’here, ’n s’here, ’n s’here, ’n s’here.” (Business of sweeping hand over picture to demonstrate the various curves which are invisible to us, but interesting, nevertheless.) “There is nothing prettier in the world than the curve of a woman’s back. Clever artist this, to repeat the curve in chairs, candelabras, windows, etc. But now I mustn’t take any more time—O, yes! Here’s a Botticelli that I just must show you. ‘Venus on the Half Shell.’ (Humph!) Venus is just awakening. (Humph!) I wish some of you would do the same. See how gently these two figures representing winds are wafting over the scene.” At this point Miss Ross demonstrates by leaning across the desk, one arm before the other, scattering papers broadly. We all rise instinctively as one, and sink weakly back into our seats when the danger subsides. “But, young ladies, we must get back to our Mr. Shelley. Miss Dixon, where does he get his stanza form?”

“Well, I don’t exactly know, Miss Ross.”

Two hundred fifteen
"Well, look at it; you have it right there before you—see here, young ladies, have you read this poem? Miss Dixon, I think we may safely say, has not read her poem. Is that right, class?" From force of habit we all nod. "Next—Prometheus—how is this representative of this period? Inner meaning? How does it differ from the others of this period? (Humph!) One fool can make more questions than twenty wise men can answer."

In the middle of this sentence the bell rings, and we all stand. Miss Ross, totally unsuspecting of our intentions, reads on in a rolling, resonant voice the words of our Mr. Shelley. As the last of the multitude disappears, she assigns the next day's lesson, pats her hands together, throws her scarf around her neck, and optimistically busies herself with the search of the textbook for the class, which has already assembled.

TO THE MOON SEEN THROUGH THE RAIN

O, calm white moon,
   Hanging halfway up the eastern sky,
I see you shining calmly through the rain,
Indifferent to such petty things
   As whether man may live or die.
The sky, your lover, softly sobbing,
   Weeps at your disdain.
But you, O radiant one, unmindful of his sigh,
   Serenely wax and wane
Afar on high.

FAMOUS WORDS OF FAMOUS PEOPLE

MISS LEAVELL: “Do-you-see-what-I-mean?”
MISS SISSON: “Girls! You’re so stupid!”
MISS NORRIS: “Isn’t that interesting?”
MRS. CHARLIE: “Girls! There’s too much noise on the hall!”
MISS CASSON: “Girls, get where I can see you.”
MISS SCRUGGS: “What does this passage remind you of?”
MR. BARTON: “Call it this, if you please.”
MISS BOYER: “Everybody knows this hymn—now don’t drag.”
MISS HAWKS: “As you have no doubt seen in our catalog—”
MR. WESSON: “Please be quiet!”
MISS MORRISON: “I could call names if I wanted to. Those girls up there in the balcony—”
CONCOCTED WITH CARE

Too little learning is a dangerous thing; you may be classed with the Nit-Wits.
Great oaks from little nuts grow—at Ward-Belmont. We wonder why?
After you get what you want, you want more.
Some one said that we've had a lot of weather lately. What more do you want for $1.95?
A watch on the wrist is worth two on the Rhine.
Absence makes the heart go wander.
Bite off more than you can chew, and then chew it, or you'll miss the second helping.
We know there's a family skeleton in every closet, but it's the best policy not to make any bones of it.
The proof of the eating is in the gaining thereof.
The longest way round is the sweetest way home.
Don't gather ye rosebuds unless you're crazy about appearing at council.
A stitch in time saves a pair of hose.
Too many chaperons spoil the party.
Any one can dance at any ole time, but it takes a mosquito to do a real dance at midnight.
A hair in the head is worth two in the brush.
The early bird gets the first bath.
Two A's are better than one.
All is not beauty that looks it.
Any ole person can go to college, but it takes a wise one to be collegiate. No foolin'.
So's your ole man—and how?
Gentlemen prefer blondes—and all that sort of rot.

A W.-B. SHOPPING PARTY

Well, I donned my funeral black and betook myself up to North Front to meet the dear chaperon. Never thought to look on "the list posted in Middle March"—not I—but just trotted gaily down and atached myself to Mrs. Padgett.

"Girl! What are you doing here?" said Mrs. Padgett. "Haven't you mixed your party?"

Well about that time up tripped another chaperon, and something made me think there was a mistake somewhere.

"You! You over in the corner—what's your name?"

Humph! About that time I was sure there was something wrong, but I realized in time that if I didn't want to start a riot then and there, I'd better seize her by the arm and offer to pay her street car fare.

The street car came after we'd been waiting about twenty minutes, and she'd called the roll three times to keep her girls together. I seated myself four seats away from the chaperon, and in the course of the trip she shouted in a stage whisper every three blocks for me to pull my dress down, or to give the lady a seat, or to be sure to thank the gentleman who had offered me his, or to be more quiet.

We disembarked at Castner's corner, and all assembled in front of the store, while she called roll again. When she found that none were missing, she began her little lecture on the dangers of big city traffic. She explained at great length that the red light didn't mean to cross the street, and that if we lost our way, just to ask a policeman; and, by all means, whatever we did, we should meet her at five o'clock at Loveman's to go for refreshments. Then she called roll again, and we dispersed to buy out Nashville.

The next hour was one mad rush from Stief's to Kress's, back to Castner's, and thence to Loveman's. Don't ever think we were late! Nay, we were six minutes early—if you can believe it—and even at that the chaperon was there ahead of us. Well, she checked our names off, and we rushed upstairs to purchase some socks; and when we came back, she took our names again. About that time the rest of the party had hailed in; so she called roll again, and we started for Kleeman's.

"Now, girls, give your order; and if you must buy some candy, go up and get it—and, remember, not more than one pound."

Well, we ate, and then we rushed to the street car; and, to keep peace in the crowd, I offered to pay the chaperon's fare. Big-hearted! And I was too exhausted to scream across the car, and scarcely had breath enough to answer to roll call when we finally arrived back at W.-B.
PON the surface of the sky several small clouds are floating. They are white clouds on a rather dull sky. But now their edges and higher surfaces are beginning to turn a delicate shell pink, shimmering against the deeper folds of mother-of-pearl.

The whole sky is flushing along its eastern edge; the sun is beginning another day. Yes, it is just another day for the sun to rise; it has risen upon countless thousands of days. Thus this sunrise becomes an ordinary happening; but, O what a really important one!

The campus is all fresh, tender, and green—such a delicate young shade of green! The flowers, the trees, and the earth have only a few weeks worn their new spring coverings. On through the trees, on through the trees, the eye can scan. It seems a campus for all the world like a beautiful park. Here and there is a bed of tulips, their gay color relieving the stretches of green; and farther on are the bridal-wreath bushes, their cool, white, graceful branches adding a look of purity to all. From every tree comes the soft chirping of birds; they love this early morning time. The whole campus is clothed anew. All ugliness of winter is hidden. Everywhere is the pulsation, the vibration of nature taking new life. Yes, it is just another spring. It has come year after year and is expected.

What a really beautiful picture the campus makes! But in reality it is only the background for a greater, more beautiful picture—my life at Ward-Belmont—a picture I can look back on wherever I may be, next year, all years that are to come—yes, a picture I can share only with my inner heart and perhaps with those who have been here, too; but even then there will always be that unexplainable, incomparable something my school means only to me.

Perhaps as I fill this picture in on the background of the campus, I can find a way to explain what it all means. Days here at school have been spent in classrooms. Teachers have spent many hours explaining, giving meaning to the world’s greatest thoughts as they are written for us in those life companions, books. There have been weary hours—hours almost of despair—but in the end always the exaltation of a lesson learned. Classroom life has not been the only life; indeed, it has been only the beginning of another life—that of the friendships made and the good times they have brought. Day in and day out these friends have stood all tests known. They are loved; they love in return. And though physically they may not always be able to walk with me, I shall never be without the happy memory of them. I am sure that such characters as I have known here will serve always to spur me on and on. Yes, always books and friends make up a school life, some will say. Then let me add that there is a bigger, a finer, a better side to the wonderful life here. That side is built of ideals. Life would surely be worthless, books and friends would be purposeless, if ideals were lacking. People may have degraded ideals, or they may have high ones, but I know that ideals as I have learned them here are the only things that could make a life complete.

The friendships formed here remind me just a little of the verdant green, covering the winter ugliness of the campus; for it is my friends who have made my life a happy, happy one. They have smoothed away the hardships. If I am to liken the natural beauty around the campus to the life upon it, I may say that the lessons and thoughts of great men, as I have read them from the printed pages, are like those clouds far above—things beautiful, things to be admired, things to be looked up to. Then the ideals—do they not add the touch of spiritual beauty to life which the bridal wreath adds to nature’s picture?

Two hundred twenty-two
I have said that perhaps to the sun this is just another morning to rise, to do his duty; that perhaps to the spring it is just another year to come and give energy to a disheartened, winter-tortured world. To me it is not so. This morning, with its beauties of spring, made more beautiful by lights from the sun, has made me realize that in a few weeks my life at Ward-Belmont is done. It is as a book, and I am writing the last chapter as I live from day to day in these last weeks. The first chapters are beautiful with all they hold, but the peace of seeing two of life's happiest years closing is sad; yet it is wonderful.

I am virtually standing in one world looking out into the next. It is with fear, naturally, of the unknown which lies beyond to fill the years of my life. But, come what may, I have many of life's dearest treasures which I have made my own through these two years, and I can always be comforted and helped by them. I defy those unknown things to make me forget, ever, these two wonderful years.

MERCHANT OF DREAMS

By Alice Isabel Ingram

The merchant of dreams came down one day,
    When the sky was red in the west,
Sauntering down the road from the town,
    Peddling his wares like the rest.

Why not buy what I sell? Roses must fade,
    Glory pass on to its due.
Beauty must dim; love even dies.
    My dreams are ever new.

You may take your choice;
    Price there is none,
Save a loosing of mind,
    So the memory may run.

POEM

When I am torn by fierce, relentless pangs of grief,
By storms of pity for those unhappy ones who fall;
When my soul is wracked with lofty aspirations
To do great things, to conquer over all;
When I feel strange longings and sudden passions in my heart,
Then sometimes I wish I were a clod, a stone, a tree,
Or anything inanimate that cannot feel and know,
But exists calm, serene, and free;
Not sad and yet not happy,
Ignorant of human joy and woe.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

Dear Cynthia:
I have two boy friends who love me. How can I tell which loves me the more?
Your admirer,
MARGARET DIXON.

Dear Margaret:
The only thing I can advise you to do is to die and see which one takes it the worse.
CYNTHIA.

Dear Cynthia:
Do you know any eligible young man who would like to marry a good-looking, sweet-tempered, economical girl of about nineteen summers?
Your friend,
ELLEN ROBINSON.

Dear Ellen:
I don't know any who wouldn't.
CYNTHIA.

Dear Cynthia:
Do you know a good-looking, wealthy, fascinating, and charming young man of about twenty-five? I would like to meet one of that description.
Very anxious,
VIRGINIA FARMER.

P.S.—He must be a Phi. Delt.

Dear Virginia:
Sorry, I only know one of that description, and I'm working on him myself.
CYNTHIA

Dear Cynthia:
I love a boy two years my junior. What would you advise me to do? I want to marry him.

Dear Gertrude:
O, well, Gertrude, if you're willing, why should we worry?

CYNTHIA

MEDLEY

BY ALICE ISABEL INGRAM

In this world of hungry hearts,
Each grasps for his moon,
Some are never found at all,
Others found too soon,
Moons there are of happiness,
Moons there are of fame;
Every soul must have a moon,
And many are the same.

O, hearts there are that seek by night,
And hearts that seek by day;
But many do not try at all,
And drop beside the way—
Worn out with following by-paths,
Turning off too soon,
Losing their road to happiness,
Losing their glimpse of the moon.

Dizzy: "Where I come from the mosquitoes are so think you can swing a pint cup around your head and catch a quart."
Dizzier: "Aw, that ain't nothin'. Where I come from the mosquitoes are so think that when you want to talk to a fellow you have to throw a rock at him and talk through the hole."

---

Son: "O, see, mother; see that funny tramp with that piece of wrapping paper!"
Mamma (very fondly): "Sh-h—not so loud, son; he may hear you. That's not a tramp; that's a college graduate with his diploma.

Music Will Complete the Joys of Your Home

Magnificent furniture, rare paintings, and exquisite drapery are evidences of affluence and good taste; but what do these things, beautiful as they may be, contribute to the culture and happiness of the owner? That a house is wonderfully furnished does not by any means indicate that it is a happy home. Something more is required, and that is music. Music from time immemorial has always been and still is the greatest entertainer the world has ever known. In the most beautiful homes, in the humblest abode, its influence is recognized. What a sad commentary to see a home without a musical instrument!

Then let us not forget the importance of a fine piano, a Duo-Art Reproducing Piano, Orthophonic Victrola or dependable Radiola. All of these as well as every musical requirement are available at "Music Headquarters" upon most convenient terms.
